Election 2007:

The Race for Councilmember-at-Large Heats Up

By Benjamin Bates

As the elections season heats up with races across the state; the Governor's seat as well as several important offices including the State Senate and State Representative that are presently without incumbents. And as the clock ticks closer to the day when the voters will make their decision about who will be their elected officials, candidates are jockeying for position canvassing communities seeking the support of their respective constituencies.

While every race is important, the one that is being watched by most New Orleanians is the race for City Council-at-Large. It is a seat that has been left vacant because of the recent shocking development that popular and longtime councilmember Oliver Thomas resigned amidst a sea of controversy as he pled guilty to accepting bribes from a longtime associate of former New Orleans Mayor Morial, businessman Stan 'Pampy' Barre who was convicted of wrongdoing and has accepted a plea agreement in an unrelated case.

This state of events has left the field open with a wide array of candidates spanning the political and ideological spectrum. The candidates in this race include political veterans, social activists, businesspersons, and political novices that are vying for this coveted seat. Loyola University in conjunction with several community groups from across the city came together to hold a forum where all the candidates in this crowded field showed up in attempt to convince voters that they were best qualified to fill this vacant seat.

The theme of purging the city of the long legacy corruption of politics in Louisiana was at the forefront of the discussion. Dyan 'Mama Dee' French, a resident of the Treme Neighborhood and a longtime community activist and one of the candidates said, "It is time for a different approach to government where people are not just about taking care of just a few people, but about all of the people of the city." Tommie Vassel, who is a businessman and has also worked inside of city government touted his experience alluding to him being the candidate that can best work in the business and political community, saying the people are demanding proven effective leadership and that he is the person best qualified to fill the job. While all the candidates agreed that corruption was a problem that needed remedying the young fiery candidate Quentin Brown said as his voice rang with passion, "I am sick and tired of career politicians and I have a vendetta against these politicians who are not doing their job, and I am tired of all the corruption and we need a change, that's why I'm running, and it's up to regular people like myself to put pressure on these politicians so they can do the right things."

Another issue that came up during the forum is the recent crime wave that has hit the city again giving New Orleans the distinction of being one of America's most violent cities. Kaare Johnson, host of a local radio talk show and one of the candidates said he would put more officers on the streets to make them safe and try to provide more funding for community policing programs. Diana Bajoie, who has been a fixture in New Orleans politics for several decades, said that the problem is not simply about crime but of access to resources and that it is important to work on other things such as improving educational and economic opportunities to combat crime.

While the city is in recovery mode there has been an economic fallout and the city is struggling waiting for something to ignite the economic engine that will jumpstart the local economy. Longtime elected official and former New Orleans City Councilperson Jackie Clarkson, said during the forum, "I have served for thirty-eight years as a private and public person making an impact providing jobs and that is what I'll continue to do if I am elected." Former New Orleans CAO Kimberly Williamson-Butler who was recently exonerated from events stemming from her stint as Clerk of Court of the City of New Orleans said, "I have a wealth of experience working in different cities such as New York and San Francisco, as a consulting revitalization specialist, and I have helped those and aided them in becoming viable cities that value diversity and giving the citizens the power to define what they want for their neighborhoods', and in this crucial time for New Orleans I want to help the citizens of the city do the same thing."

As the election grows closer many citizens are not back in their homes, and many more are still displaced, this is a major issue of concern to the voters. Cynthia Willard-Lewis who represents City Council District E where the devastated areas of the Lower Ninth Ward and New Orleans East are located says she is seeking higher office to continue to fight for the people of the city and getting them the resources to rebuild their homes and have a city where people's welfare is placed before politics.

This election has many people offering themselves for service in this crucial time, and these elections may impact the city and the state's future for many years to come, as a city and the state works to rebuild, and renew itself. And the unanswered questions are will it be a city that will be a place that is prosperous, progressive and productive, or will it sank deeper into the abyss? The voters of Louisiana have a chance to have a voice in choosing what direction it wants to go in when they go to the polls on October 20th 2007.

With the elections set for October 20th it is an important day for the city and the state as they try to rebuild, and it is essential that people get out and vote, and Data News Weekly the People's Paper will be focusing on the candidates in several key races and we want you to participate so if you have any questions for the candidates for our upcoming Election Edition send your questions or suggestions to dataneswseditor@bellsouth.net

Culture at a Crossroads Faubourg Treme: The Story of Black New Orleans

By Edwin Buggage

Recently, the dissonant sounds of brass blared through the Treme Neighborhood, it is a historical tradition of this storied area of America's most interesting city; the band played as revelers followed in a procession honoring the passing of one of its own, tuba player Kerwin James. As the parade proceeded with a cadre of followers, as many as twenty police cars arrived upon the scene responding to complaints by newly arrived residents of the community which led to the arrest of two of the musicians' drummer Derrick Tabb, and trombonist Glen David Andrews.

Treme is a place with a rich history spanning centuries and is the oldest African-American neighborhood in America. After Hurricane Katrina and the displacement of many of its inhabitants, Treme like many other areas of the crescent city is experiencing a fight for its cultural life. As the lifeline to a rich and vibrant place may be strangled by newly arrived people to this close knit community, and where the spirit from its past and present: Sidney Bechet, Jelly Roll Morton to Trombone Shorty and many others may be in jeopardy as the city faces what many are calling a second reconstruction. And many are asking what will happen to these traditions that make New Orleans such a special place?

Times-Picayune columnist and Treme resident Lolis Eric Elie along with Dawn Logsdon daughter of noted historian the late Joseph Logsdon and Lucie Faulknor along with co-executive producers Stanley Nelson and New Orleanian Wynton Marsalis; together they have produced a gripping documentary about the history of this cultural jewel of a community nestled outside of the French Quarter entitled Faubourg Treme: The Untold Story of Black New Orleans which will be showing at the New Orleans Film Festival at 5 P.M. and 7 P.M Sunday at Canal Place. For Elie this is a labor of love, a love of a people, a city and a neighborhood; he says of the film and its increased importance after Hurricane Katrina. "We have lost a lot as a result of the federal levees failing and the city being flooded. It helps us to understand what has been lost; it is also to remind us that the process of destruction of the history of the architecture, and the legacy began long before the Hurricane Katrina, so this film is an attempt to revitalize interest in our city."

Elie narrates and stars in the film serving as a tour guide of sorts taking the viewer on a historical journey from the beginnings to present day Treme. In the film he interviews notable residents, who speak about important events that have occurred in the Treme community. As per the events that happened in Treme recently he feels what is happening presently in the city mirrors what happened after the Civil War during reconstruction, " I feel like the city is undergoing a reconstruction, but this is the second reconstruction we are going through. When you look at the issues you see a lot of the same things, and what we argue in the film is that the failure to address these issues appropriately after the Civil War is linked directly to people being stuck in the Superdome unable to help themselves." "And our hope is that the film becomes part of the discussion about how we can move forward in such a way as to include all New Orleanians in the recovery and rebuilding of our city."

Life in New Orleans is a very unique experience, where the sonorous sounds of music makes one have an extra bounce in their step, or their life palate is a plate filled with the joy and wonder of a place that is a marriage of that which is modern and antiquated that co-exist in a special sacred way that is one of the distinctive things about calling the big easy home. After Katrina with many buildings in ruins and people scattered about the country what will happen to the culture and traditions of the city? Elie feels that a cultural war is taking place, "In the city right now there is a culture war and what it means to be a true New Orleanian, between eating a big mac and a po-boy, between listening to whatever they are playing on the radio, and listening to our music." "While I understand we have to be part of the modern world and embrace these changes we can't let these changes suffocate us."

In a world post Katrina New Orleans the word progress has been used in a mantra like way and has taken on many different definitions, but the question becomes what is progress by New Orleans standards since the city does not always easily fit into the mold that is the rest of the country. Lolis Eric Elie feels progress should be judge by those who it affects not those from outside of the community, "Most of the time when people talk about progress they talk about being less like ourselves and more like the rest of the country, I don't think we have to do that."

As the people of the city continue to fight to get back home and those who are here struggle to survive, and keep the culture, heritage and spirit alive; Elie feels maintaining and preserving the culture of the city is not a one size fit all project, "We all need to figure out how we need to preserve our culture, and there is not one answer, it is not like everyone should be doing the same thing." "We all need to figure what it is about this culture whether it's the food, the music, the way we talk to each other, the way we dance, the way we build our homes. Whatever is important to you should be part of preserving the culture so that it can live on."

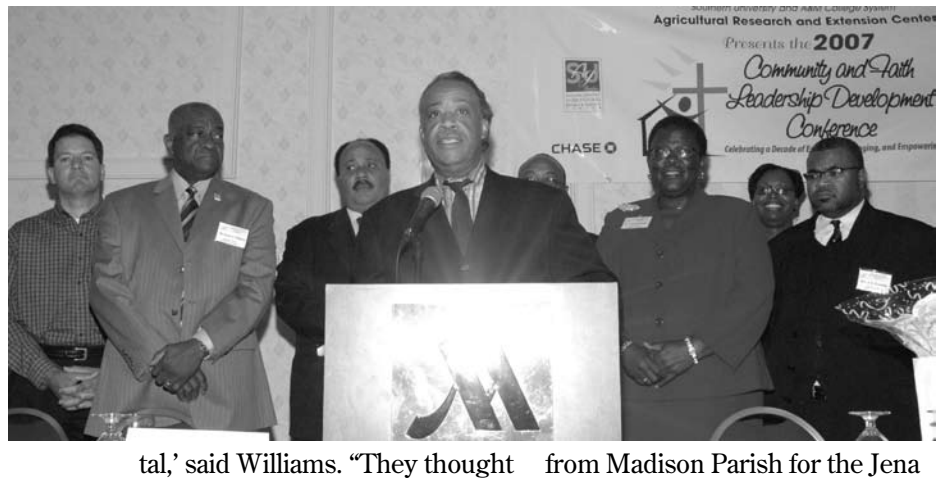
Sharpton and King motivate 200 local leaders

BATON ROUGE – The Rev. Al Sharpton and Martin Luther King III brought an unexpected message of hope and encouragement to 200 faith and community leaders gathered at the Southern University Ag Center's annual leadership development conference earlier today. King and Sharpton remained in the state after last week's march and rally supporting the 'Jena 6' defendants.

Conference planner Gina E. Eubanks said the surprise visit and comments from Sharpton and King placed greater emphasis on the conference theme of extending, engaging, and empowering leaders across Louisiana.

"[Sharpton and King] are here to extend knowledge of what happened in Jena, but they are not doing it by themselves, they are engaging the community. They left the leaders here with the impression that they can go forward with their own efforts of community empowerment," said Eubanks, vice chancellor for extension of the Southern University Ag Center. "To have national figures take time out of their schedule and say a few words of encouragement, that's empowerment and it shows that they understand what Southern University is doing for the citizens of Louisiana."

The community and faith leadership development conference is in its 10th year and is a three-day training event for leaders of non-profit organizations, churches, synagogues, housing and community development corporations and youth centers.



"What we are doing here is carrying out our land-grant mission of educating people who are not enrolled in Southern's academic programs, but who can take the vast resources of the university and apply it to their businesses, family and apply it to the success and mobility of their citizenry," Ag Center Chancellor Leodrey Williams said.

The fact that Sharpton and King walked in on this conference for leaders is more than 'coincidental,' said Williams. "They thought enough of what we are doing to pause and give encouragement to all the participants and the leadership. They are sincere about what they are doing. This is important for leaders to do things like this."

Sharpton and King spoke to the group at the request of Tallulah mayor Eddie Beckwith Jr. and ag center extension agent Sarah Sims and Eubanks. Beckwith and Sims actively mobilize groups from Madison Parish for the Jena Six march."We were blessed by their presence…to have them here brings more importance to what Southern is doing…. It's a glimmer of hope for the impending change that could take place," said Rev. Rene Brown, pastor of Mt. Zion First Baptist Church, Baton Rouge.

Landrieu Secures Key Savings to Help Hire More Police

Senate passes measure to waive local match requirement on federal COPS grants

WASHINGTON (10/4/07) - The United States Senate today passed unanimously an amendment by U.S. Senator Mary L. Landrieu, D-La., which would waive for hurricane-affected communities the funds they would otherwise be required to pay to receive federal COPS grants.

The Community Oriented Policing (COPS) program provides grants for local police departments to hire more officers, provide overtime pay, and obtain equipment and support systems. It normally requires localities to pay at least 25 percent of the expense. Under Sen. Landrieu's amendment to the Commerce, Justice, Science, and Related Agencies Appropriations Act, H.R. 3093, that requirement would be waived and the federal government would bear the full cost of new grants to the region.

"With much of the New Orleans Police Department and other Louisiana law enforcement agencies still operating out of temporary facilities, budgets are stretched thin," said Sen. Landrieu. "This amendment will help these cash-strapped communities buy the equipment they need and put more officers on the street by making sure they are not shut out of the COPS application process."

The City of New Orleans currently has the highest per capita murder rate in the country, with more than 160 slayings in 2006 and more than 150 so far this year. The New Orleans Police Department, having lost more than 500 officers - roughly 30 percent of the force - in the wake of Hurricane Katrina, has recently moved to 60-hour workweeks to put more officers on the street to combat the crime surge. This amendment, if enacted into law, would make it possible for the city to receive federal COPS grants without dipping into its limited financial resources.

"I want to comment on Senator Landrieu's amendment . . . It's a smart thing we're doing," said Senator Tom Coburn, R-Okla., who had spent much of the day on the floor objecting to amendments he deemed too costly. "It's right. It will come to an end at some time, but until they get back on their feet, we'll do it."

Sen. Landrieu also introduced an amendment today that would require the Justice Department to use pre- Katrina and Rita population figures in calculating other law enforcement grants, known as Byrne grants, which use population as a factor in determining grant size. This amendment will be considered by the Senate when it returns from the Columbus Day recess on October 15.

Allan Houston/Citigroup Business Education and Development Program Seeks New Groups of Aspiring Entrepreneurs in New Orleans

The Allan Houston Legacy Foundation, Citigroup / Smith-Barney and Lenovo have partnered together with the National Foundation for Teaching Entrepreneurship (NFTE) and the Harlem YMCA, with additional support from the Greater Harlem Chamber of Commerce, to bring one of the most comprehensive and progressive young entrepreneurship programs in the country to Harlem, NY and New Orleans, LA.

Designed specifically for young adults aged 18 to 25, the Allan Houston / Citigroup Business Education and Development Program is a free twenty-four week intensive training program that consists of twice-weekly evening courses at the Harlem YMCA in New York City and the Dryades YMCA in New Orleans. Up to fifty applicants are selected in New York and up to twenty-five in New Orleans. The objective is to develop knowledgeable and enterprise-ready entrepreneurs within these communities. Each participant is given the tools, resources and guidance needed to build a successful business plan.

At the conclusion of the educational and instruction stage, two entrepreneurs are chosen to enter the Allan Houston / Lenovo Small Business Incubator to receive an additional year of support including free office space, a team of advisors to help guide the implementation of their Business Plans, and up to $20,000 in start-up capital. Through the incubation process, these entrepreneurs will receive the resources they need to build sustainable businesses with lasting economic benefit to their families, neighborhoods and larger communities.

With the recent devastating destruction of Hurricane Katrina in New Orleans and the strong need for career, technical, and vocational programs in New York City, Allan Houston / Citigroup Business Education and Development Program offers positive alternatives for personal and community empowerment through a unique collaboration of celebrity, civic and corporate giving.

"One of the ways we hope to assist in the New Orleans recovery effort is to support the re-establishment of an economic structure by helping the citizens start their own businesses. The program is designed to empower the community and provided them with tools to create that structure. To me, that's powerful." said Allan Houston.

"The long term benefits of this type of educational program is phenomenal and long overdue. Not only will it tremendously impact and develop the future leaders of New Orleans but it will also help revitalize the economic opportunities in the New Orleans community by creating entrepreneurs while attracting large businesses back to the city," said Diana Beasley, Executive Director - "The New Orleans Journey Home Center" City of New Orleans, Mayor C. Ray Nagin Office.

"The opportunity for Citigroup/ Smith Barney to support this program builds upon our leadership in bringing financial education, business and life skills to underserved populations. We are excited to expand our successful relationships in this field to include Allan Houston and each of the partners in support of this very worthy cause," said Mindy Ross, Managing Director of Smith Barney's Community Investment and Financial Education Programs.

This summer Allan Houston and Citigroup welcomed Lenovo as a new partner. As the third largest PC maker in the world, Lenovo has dedicated itself to supporting the launch of 10,000 new businesses around the world over the next ten years.

While you've been struggling to recover from Hurricane Katrina, Sen. Ann Duplessis says she's been taking care of business. Whose business do you think she's been taking care of?

Get ready, it's not yours.

Taking care of big business.
Sen. Ann Duplessis had a 66% rating from the Louisiana Association of Business & Industry – twice as high as the average rating of all other African-American senators from New Orleans. She even voted more for big business than a Republican senator from Kenner! (Times Picayune, August 18, 2007 – "Business group rates lawmakers on their votes").

Getting Rid of Our Black Elected Officials.
What white voters have never considered at the ballot box, Sen. Ann Duplessis accomplished in the State Senate – the wholesale elimination of Black elected officials. Turning her back on 38 years of progress, Sen. Ann Duplessis was the only senator from New Orleans to vote for legislation to get rid of black judges and clerks of court – all at a time when crime is rampant and courts are backlogged. (Senate Bill 645, Act 621 - 2006 Regular Session)

Getting rid of our school teachers.
Sen. Ann Duplessis teamed up with a Republican legislator from Baton Rouge to allow the state take-over of our public schools – resulting in the firing of teachers, principals, cafeteria employees, custodians, and school bus drivers. (House Bill 121, Act 35 – 2005 1st Extraordinary Session, Co-sponsored by Sen. Ann Duplessis)

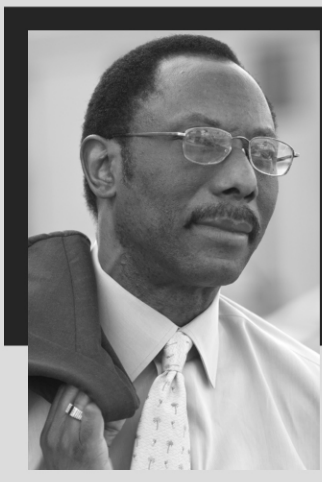
Getting rid of New Orleans control of Economic Development.
The first piece of legislation authored and passed by Sen. Ann Duplessis got rid of New Orleans control of the New Orleans Business and Industrial District – renamed by Duplessis as New Orleans Regional Business Park. Legislation passed by Duplessis allows elected officials from St. Bernard, Plaquemines, Jefferson, and St. Tammany parishes to name a member of the board. (Senate Bill 545, Act 917 – 2004 Regular Session, Sponsored by Sen. Ann Duplessis)

Getting rid of controls on Section 8 Housing.
Sen. Ann Duplessis asked the State to hold up on government-supported apartment complexes in eastern New Orleans. It's a little late. Her appointee to the Louisiana Housing Finance Agency – who serves as its chairman – already approved 14 multifamily housing developments in eastern New Orleans. (Times Picayune, March 8, 2007, "N.O. may idle housing in east.")

Getting rid of hopes to rebuild.
Governor Kathleen Blanco credits Sen. Duplessis for helping with the Road Home Program. Only problem the Road Home isn't helping enough people to rebuild and recover – with 227,969 applications received, only 18% have resulted in closings. (Governor Blanco Press Release, December 20, 2006, "Governor Blanco announces Road Home changes;" Road Home Weekly Situation & Pipeline Report – August 16, 2007)

Getting rid of hopes to recover.
Sen. Ann Duplessis discouraged residents from returning by warning "against a toxic environment" and claiming the ground was contaminated and should be converted to green space. (Times Picayune, October 20, 2005, "Nagin defends moves on water restoration.")

Hasn't Sen. Ann Duplessis gotten rid of enough?
It's time to get rid of her.



We need a Senator who will take care of the people's business. We need a Senator who won't be a tool for big business and outside interests. We need a Senator who will help us rebuild and recover in New Orleans East and the Lower Ninth Ward.

We need Jon Johnson now more than ever!

"What Happened to Forgiveness, and Where Did It Go?" Part II

Dr. Aaron E. Harold

We all should know by now that we are not perfect. However, there are many of you that may think so, but if you're honest with yourself everyone of us have made mistakes in the past. It doesn't matter how religious we may be, or how much we believe in God, we will continue to make mistakes as long as we live, but we have to realize that it is not the end of the world. We all have done some things that we are not proud of. Many of us have hurt people that we love or loved very much, whether it may be intentionally or unintentionally.

Some of us have broken the hearts of those that have put their whole trust in us. We have disappointed people who once had confidence in us in spite of our faults and short comings. Many of us who have been hurt in life, have not learn how to forgive those who have hurt us, and are still holding on to the hurt and pain of what those persons have done to us. Nevertheless, this unforgiveness thing is destroying our relationship with our families, friends, and other associates. I have talked to people on many occasions, and I would ask them the question. Why are you so angry?

The response that I would get most often is because somebody broke my heart or misused and abused me. Folks its time for us to work towards learning how to forgive. Again, what happened to forgiveness, and where did it go? At one time, we where able to forgive one another no matter what happened to us. Today, many of us have forgotten how to forgive. We have become bitter, spiteful, and vengeful toward one another. Where did that spirit we once had called forgiveness go? Many of us have lost it and we have programmed it out of our minds. Some of us have allowed it to grow into hatefulness, and we have become cold-hearted because of it.

Do you remember the response that we had with Katrina as it relates to helping and saving the lives of those that were suffering? This was when the blame game started. Our elected officials seem to blame each other for not responding soon enough to what had happened to the citizens of our city. Again, we all need forgiveness from something, and all mean all. Let's stop the finger pointing, and let's begin to mend some of these broken relationships if we can.

In the Bible, Matthew chap. 6 verses 35-37, Jesus teaches his disciples to love, don't judge or you will be judge, condemn not or you will be condemned, and most of all forgive anybody who wrong you, and the day will come when everyone of us will need some forgiveness. So, my brothers and sisters, let's start back forgiving again, and I promise you that it will be a healing to your spirit, and a revival to your soul. Jesus forgave them who were crucifying him on the cross and they were guilty (Luke 23, versus 33-34). If God forgave and is still forgiving, then we must do what he demonstrated for us to also do, and that is to forgive.

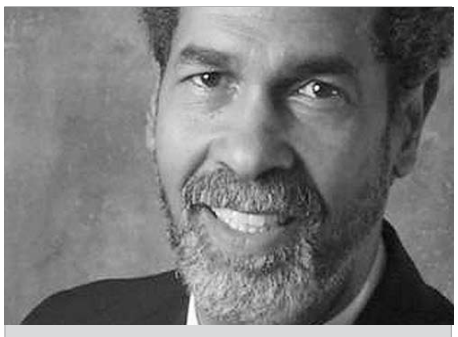
No More Angry Black Man



The Love Dr.
Data Columnist

The Love Dr.

LD's Mission: to communicate the benefits, opportunities and personal fulfillment of family living, while sharing priorities, skills and methods for making family life work. When young people get married, stay married and raise their children, the cycle of poverty is broken.

Those of you who have watched our "Between The Lines" show lately have seen the outpourings of "angry black men". These outpourings are justified, therapeutic, and entertaining, but otherwise useless, because they neither teach, stimulate or inform those watching how to make the best use of their talents or resources to improve life for themselves and their families.

We who live in cities have a distorted view and understanding of America, and the actual power we as black Americans have in the politics and policies of America. Because urban centers were evacuated by whites all across America for about thirty years, we took control of the ballot box and elected people who looked like us, but sadly whose elections were most often still financed by the same white wealth that thereby continued to have much influence with the folk we elected.

Even this diluted black political power doesn't exist outside of urban America, where we are now concentrated. This reality is reflected by all the effort it is taking to provide justice for six teenage boys in Jena, Louisiana, where obviously the DA feels his political bread is buttered by keeping blacks "in their place". I am one who never believed that the Jena DA would have a change of heart, and he didn't. I also believe that his stance makes him popular with many voters, as has Harry Lee's ranting about black criminals. Thank God for a juvenile court judge in Jena who had the courage to do the right thing.

I am also old enough to know that many black people and families who are enjoying the benefits of the civil right's struggle, never participated: didn't boycott, didn't sit-in, didn't march, didn't send money, and quite often disavowed the efforts of those who were shaking up the system.

The civil rights legislation that marked the legalization of black civic and political participation was not passed by people we had elected, in many places few of us could register until after civil rights legislation. It was passed by a nation of primarily "white" people who when confronted with the evil against us made visible on the evening news everyday, decided to do the right thing and legally recognize the humanity of black people.

It was courageous people who made the civil rights movement happen and succeed. It took courageous news reporters, courageous marchers, courageous lawyers, courageous congressmen and senators and a courageous president to defy the outright racism and bigotry that was displayed in the south whenever black people sought equality. Courageous people come in all colors.

Actually, other than personal excellence and the defensive stances that we take whenever we feel that our rights are being threatened, blacks can do little to eliminate the impact of racism on our lives. Most of us will live lives in which racism will continue to require more effort from us to have what others enjoy without having to prove their humanity. Most blacks will never have access to the hearts and minds of really bigoted people, but courageous white people can have an impact inside their famiy and social circles.

Many years ago I decided to "let ice water flow through my veins", that is to not waste any energy on bigots and racist, other than to be diligent and aware in my dealings with people and institutions that meant me no good. I may not be able to eliminate racism from our lives, but I can teach how to live meaningful, enjoyable, and prosperous lives in spite of racism, and isn't that the real victory.

Refusing to "stay in your place" is the battle call. Achieving excellence in the face of adversity is still the most powerful weapon against people who would deny you, but you don't do it for them, you don't discuss it with them, you don't even care how they feel about it. Its about understanding that the only person you can change is yourself, but making self change changes how others have to deal with you.

I hope and pray that there are still courageous white people who are doing what they have to do to be true to their faiths and beliefs, challenging ignorance and evil. On a certain level, how America deals with us depends on how white people vote in Oregon, Iowa, Montana, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Missouri, Illinois… Unfortunately, however, modern media no longer covers our struggles, and working white people find themselves struggling against and victimized by the same kind of evil greed that created racism as a way to exploit black people. Today's media is part of the corporate greed that is about driving all of us to believe that in the pursuit of status and image we should buy everything they sell, on credit, turning all working Americans into overextended wage slaves. That same media has marginalized black people to the extent that I'll bet that if you do a word association with most people around the world you would discover that the phrase "Black American" would get a response like "crime", or "gangsters" or "rap". Could all this make me angry? Certainly!

"Between The Lines" is the one little piece of media that I get to use to help us do what we need to do for ourselves, and I just don't want to waste any more time, effort and emotional energy being upset about bigots I can never change. We have too much to do for ourselves, and most of that is about family and how we deal with resources and opportunities. And that's why I am the "love doctor".
